CLIENT OBJECTIVES

HYDE ENGINEERING + CONSULTING was operating out of two locations, Boulder and Louisville. The client's objective was to consolidate operations into a single, unified location, presenting an opportunity not only to streamline operations but also to expand the company's footprint. By relocating and expanding, the company reduced overhead costs, improved communication and collaboration among teams, and created a more cohesive organizational culture. The expansion strategy would involve selecting a new location that accommodates current and future growth, offering sufficient space for additional employees, advanced technology infrastructure, and enhanced facilities. Additionally, the company can leverage this move to renegotiate leases, invest in sustainable building practices, and enhance its brand presence in a more centralized, accessible area, ultimately driving long-term success and scalability.

RESULTS

Cresa located a building that offers the necessary utilities for the lab and provides ample space to accommodate both the lab and the corporate office.
