

Craig Zodikoff

Managing Principal San Francisco

Professional Experience

Craig Zodikoff serves as Managing Principal for Cresa's San Francisco office. For over 25 years, his real estate experience has included global real estate portfolio and workplace strategy, capital markets, mergers and acquisitions, build-to-suits, site selection, labor analysis, incentives and dispositions. He has completed several hundred transactions ranging from 1,200-2 million square feet in urban, suburban and remote markets and has managed individual accounts in excess of 18 million square feet.

Through regional, national and global account relationships, Craig has led projects within every asset type from sales offices to headquarters, R&D to major distribution centers, including over 8 million square feet of build to suit projects. His expertise spans many industries including consumer products, professional services, life sciences, technology, non-profits, and manufacturing / supply chain.

Craig has been quoted in multiple real estate periodicals, presented on industry panels and won awards for his community impact. At the beginning of his career, Craig was a practicing attorney focusing in the areas of corporate law, bankruptcy and commercial real estate. He has served on several boards including Cresa's Board of Directors.
